The Harvard Community Health Plan (HCHP) is a prepaid group practice medical plan delivering care to over 56,000 members in the metropolitan Boston area. HCHP is offered as an alternative to traditional health insurance and provides a broad range of medical services that include personal physician care and hospital care. Membership is available through more than 1,800 Boston area employers unions, the Department of Public Welfare, and on a non-group (individual) basis.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield Labor Relations Office

Blue Cross and Blue Shield established a Labor Relations Office six years ago. The purpose for the formation of this office was to enable the labor community to establish a liaison, which could better meet the needs of the union member.

Bob Halloran was given the assignment in 1970 to establish the Labor Relations Office and he still serves today as the Manager of Labor Relations. In August of 1975 Paul Monica joined the office as Labor Representative.

The functions of the Labor Relations Office are many and the following is a brief description of services which are available from this office.

Group Talks: Personnel from the Labor Relations Office are available to attend union meetings to explain benefits to the membership.

Claims Assistance: The Labor Relations Office, routinely establishes contact with the claims area for subscribers who may have a problem.

Seminars: Attendance and participation in educational seminars is always welcomed.

Booklets — Films: Blue Cross and Blue Shield will provide pamphlets on health related topics, eg.: Alcoholism. Films are also available.

Negotiations: The Labor Relations Office is always willing to discuss benefits with bargaining committees, officers, etc. prior to negotiations. In many situations the office is invited by labor and management to attend a bargaining session to explain present or expanded benefits.

Guest Speaker: The Labor Relations Office will provide guest speakers for labor oriented functions.

Labor Memo: The Labor Relations Office maintains a mailing list of several thousand labor leaders. A Labor Memo, which is intended to be informational concerning health care matters, legislation, etc. is periodically sent to people on this list. If you are not receiving the Labor Memo and other mailings from the Labor Relations Office simply notify them that you wish to be placed on the mailing list.

In conclusion the Blue Cross and Blue Shield Labor Relations Office was established to serve the labor community in Massachusetts. Union officials should feel free to contact this office for assistance and service. New ideas are always welcomed and should be explored with the personnel of this office.

President Joseph A. Sullivan

However, as we look through the history of the two hundred years of American freedom, we find that the many accomplishments of organized labor gives us real cause to celebrate and ample reason to be proud - and especially to inspire us to keep faith in America.

The American working people have gone through many crises since the Declaration of Independence made America free. There have been many uphill battles to be fought. But the record will show that American workers have won many more victories than they have suffered defeats.

We all know that the American economy has been in bad shape for the past seven years, and we all know that the working people of America have been the most adversely affected. But we also know that serious and honest efforts have been and are being made to pull us out of the economic slump we're in and to restore prosperity with more stability.

Since organized labor has always played a major role in the social and economic progress America has achieved over the years, we must expect that the working people will speak out loud and clear in November as to what they believe is the direction America should take. It is my opinion that it is the working people who have the greater power to determine that direction.

So my advice to my fellow workers on this Labor Day of 1976 is not only to keep faith in America but to make sure that they participate actively in all democratic processes that will decide under what conditions they and their families will live in the years immediately ahead.

LABOR DAY MESSAGE

*By Joseph A. Sullivan, President
Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO*

Once again American workers are asked to pause and celebrate the triumphs of organized labor achieved over the years. And since this is the year that America is celebrating its 200th anniversary as a free nation, we should be able to call forth, on this Labor Day the same enthusiasm and the same spirit that planners of bicentennial celebrations have been able to stir up across the land.

Unfortunately, we cannot ignore the fact that there are too many millions of American working men and women who feel that there is no cause for celebration and nothing to stir up enthusiasm. They are the unemployed who can't find work, the sick who can't afford the high cost of medical care, and the high school and college graduates who have entered the labor force to find the doors to the opportunities they dreamed about shut tight against them.

IT'S SAFER TO LIVE BESIDE A NUCLEAR POWER PLANT THAN IT IS TO DRIVE YOUR KID TO NURSERY SCHOOL.

You may already know that nuclear power plants can generate much of the electricity we need—now and in the future—at a lower cost than coal or oil burning plants.

And do it with the least possible harm to the environment.

But just as importantly, they can do it safely. Just how safely is revealed in a $3 million, 3,300-page study prepared for the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Popularly called the Rasmussen Report, this study took 60 concerned scientists and engineers two full years to prepare.

It concludes that the chances of a fatality caused by a nuclear plant reactor core meltdown in any given year are one in 5,000,000,000. (No such meltdown has ever occurred at any of the 59 operating U.S. commercial nuclear plants during more than 300 accumulated-reactor-years of operation.)

In fact, your chances of having a fatal accident driving your child to nursery school or around town* are more than 1,000,000 times greater than they are of having a fatality from a reactor meltdown.

The sooner we can start operating more nuclear power plants, the sooner we can start holding the line on the cost of your electricity.

Now and in the future.

*Annual risk figures are for the 15 million people who live within 25 miles of current or planned U.S. reactor sites and are based on current U.S. automobile accident rates.

GEORGE MEANY

AFL-CIO PRESIDENT

GEORGE MEANY'S PLATFORM PROPOSALS BY THE AFL-CIO

Following is the text of AFL-CIO President George Meany's testimony today before the Democratic Platform Committee in the Senate Caucus Room:

The American people have traditionally had confidence in the moral rightness of their system of government. They were certain it would conform, in Webster's terms, to the right ideals or principles of human conduct. Events of the four years since the major political parties last wrote their platforms have severely shaken that confidence, leading many Americans to question the direction their nation is taking.

In that period, a President and Vice President were forced to resign for unrelated criminal acts. Many leading U.S. corporations and business executives admitted widespread bribery and political payoffs at home and abroad.

The people learned their government had deceived them about foreign affairs, allowed respected agencies to violate the civil rights of citizens, and misled them about the nation's economic health, thus causing widespread hardship and suffering.

As we perceive it, morality, as it applies to government, goes far beyond the avoidance of simple criminality to a philosophy that places people, their welfare and their liberty, above all else. It encompasses the manner in which a government conducts its relations with other countries and with its own citizens.

Our belief that morality must be restored to government policies at home and abroad is the bedrock of the AFL-CIO Program for America. We are presenting it, in identical language, to the platform committees of both major political parties, for we know morality is not divisible along party lines.

Governmental morality cannot be defined in dollar amounts, placed on a chart, or reduced to a political slogan, it can't be bought, sold, traded or negotiated away. We do not think morality is old-fashioned or naive, and we reject the notion that any "new realism" is equal to or higher than morality.

Therefore, we have prepared detailed suggestions on a great many issues which follow this statement. Taken individually, they are programs for a better America and a better world. In sum, they are a re-dedication to the philosophy so eloquently expressed in the Declaration of Independence:

"We hold these Truths to be self-evident, that all Men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness — That to secure these Rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just Powers from the Consent of the Governed."

As both parties seek the consent of the governed in this election, their platform proposals on economic, foreign and domestic policy must answer this question: "Which way, America?"

The AFL-CIO believes there is only one way — the way that puts people first, that rejects arbitrary and artificial limits on what a government can and must do to help its citizens, that places the freedom of people above the politics of governments.

In detail the document we are submitting to this committee is how America's trade unionists answer the question "Which way, America?" for economic, foreign and domestic policy.

Economic Policy

We believe that government policies which perpetuate unemployment are economically and morally wrong.

In economic terms, jobs are the source of the wages that generate mass purchasing power — the underpinning of the economy. From jobs come the tax revenues government must have to provide essential services and programs to help its citizens.

As every economist agrees, each percentage point of unemployment costs the federal government $16 billion — $14 billion in lost tax revenues and $2 billion in added costs for unemployment insurance, welfare, food stamps and other social services.

Unemployment has caused havoc in America's cities — increasing welfare costs while robbing the cities of essential tax revenue. The threatened financial collapse of many cities can be directly laid to continued high unemployment.

In human terms, a job is a key measure of a person's place in society — whether as a full-fledged participant or on the outside looking in. Work is the source of individual fulfillment. It is a positive, constructive activity that broadens an individual's horizon.

Jobs are also the solution to poverty, to hunger, to filling the ever-present needs of workers to feed, clothe and shelter their families. Jobs enable a person to translate legal rights to equality into reality; and, thus, fulfill a commitment to equality laid down in the Declaration of Independence, won in revolution, secured in civil war and still not fully achieved even in our lifetime.

Thus, the AFL-CIO seeks a commitment from both parties to achieve and maintain full employment in America. We accept no other definition of full employment than a job opportunity at a decent wage for each person able and seeking work.

To the American economy, just as to individual Americans, full employment is an absolute necessity.

Because of present economic policies, 20 million American workers will be unemployed some time this year. Millions of families will be faced with the problem of surviving until the next paycheck comes, if it ever comes.

They will be faced with choices no American family should have to make: Which is more important, food on the table or a roof over their heads? Which bill must be ignored in order to buy medicine for the old folks or shoes for the children?

Then there is the mental anxiety that comes with unemployment — fear of harassment over unpaid bills, idle hours, loss of self-esteem, stresses and strains on family relationships, sometimes leading to divorce, alcoholism, drug abuse and crime. Physical health, too, is affected at a time when there is no money for doctor bills.

The average period of unemployment now lasts more than 15 consecutive weeks — nearly four months. During that time the standard of living of an unemployed family can be irreparably damaged.

High unemployment also affects the way a society perceives itself. The longer people are out of work, the more desperate their situation becomes. Yet the longer people are unemployed, the easier it is for the well-off and the comfortable to ignore the human problems caused by joblessness.

Unemployment also affects the young:

The students whose college dreams are shattered when their parents become unemployed.

The young children forced to grow up in unhealthy neighborhoods, because decent housing is beyond their parent's means.

The young mind filling with bitterness as it watches a jobless parent lose hope.

The many teenagers seeking their first "work experience" — standing in an endless line, for a job that isn't there.

High unemployment also creates stresses and strains within society, further widening the gap between the haves and the have-nots; pitting worker against worker for the available work; creating division where there should be unity. Just as America could not survive as a nation that segregated its races, it cannot survive if it segregates its people between those who work and those who are always jobless.

Specifically, we seek a flat rejection of policies that utilize unemployment as an instrument of national economic policy.

For the last seven lean years, planned unemployment has been an integral part of the economic policy of the national government. It has failed to achieve its announced goal of reducing inflation, which was 4.2 percent in 1968. Rather, planned unemployment as part of a policy of high interest rates, tight money and constricted budgets helped spawn a 57 percent increase in the Consumer Price Index since January 1969.

The inflation that has plagued America for the past seven years has not been caused by excessive demand, which is the classic reason for inflation — too many dollars chasing too few goods. Therefore, the classic weapons used by economists to fight inflation have not worked and will not work.

Instead of planned unemployment, America needs planned employment. There is nothing wrong with the American economy that more jobs wouldn't cure, and we believe that government must play a key role in that planning, along with industry and labor.

Economic planning for full employment is no more incompatible with a free enterprise system than planning for unemployment through fiscal and monetary policies. The haphazard method of economic decision-making in this country — with the Administration going one direction, the Federal reserve another, Congress going many different ways, and business and labor straining to hear the distant drummer — must be changed.

Arbitrary dollar limits placed on the ability of the economy to grow and expand must be removed. Policies that do the most good for the fewest and the least good for the most must be replaced by policies that provide all citizens with the opportunity to advance — an opportunity based on individual skills and desire, not restricted by the superficial barriers of race or sex or age or the neighborhoods in which people live. No longer should the many be forced to sacrifice much for the benefit of a chosen few.

In other words, we believe the economic choice confronting America in this election year is between a continuation of the disastrous "trickle-down" economics of the past seven years — with its recurring recessions, high unemployment, reduced buying power, and hardship, even poverty for the many — and the creation of a balanced, full employment economy built on mass purchasing power, full production and general prosperity. We choose full employment.

The economy today is in a perilous condition. The recovery to date has been too slow and too shallow to significantly reduce unemployment.

The economic upturn has resulted from consumer spending, which was substantially encouraged a year ago by the tax rebates and reduced withholding from paychecks. But there is evidence that it is a split-level consumer market, with the bulk of increased spending coming from the top one-fourth to one-third of the population, according to a respected economic analyst.

The economy needs increased consumer spending from all segments of the population if it is to sustain recovery.

The working poor, those who receive only the federal minimum wage, lack the buying power to reach even the government's poverty level.

Other workers, whose purchasing power is at 1968 levels, need substantial wage increases just to maintain their present standard of living and, thus, cannot afford new consumer spending necessary for a growing economy.

In addition, the fear of losing one's job — the specter of unemployment — still hangs over many workers, contributing to pessimism and the resultant split-level market.

Thus, the economy is in danger of another, deeper recession on the heels of the worst recession since the 1930s.

To bring the economy to full employment and to forestall future recurrences of recessions each worse than the last, America needs the following:

1. A statutory government commitment to full employment that spells out specific steps and programs that will be taken to achieve full employment and maintain it.
2. An immediate reduction in mortgage interest rates to no more than 6 percent so that the housing construction industry can once again lead this nation out of recession and fill the ever-mounting need for shelter. The federal subsidies that may be required would be one of the soundest possible investments in America.
3. An overhaul and modernization of the unemployment insurance system, the nation's first line of defense against depression.
4. A continuation of the lower federal income tax withholding rates through 1977 to provide a continuing stimulus to consumer purchasing power. In addition, gaping tax loopholes must be closed to bring justice to the tax structure and provide essential tax revenue.
5. A comprehensive energy policy to rapidly reduce the nation's dependence on insecure foreign sources of oil and to establish energy independence. At the same time, America must maintain its commitment to cleaning up the environment, adjusting timetables where necessary to achieve energy objectives but without sacrificing the goal of a clean environment.
6. A reexamination of U.S. foreign trade and investment policies that are destroying America's productive economic base and transforming this nation from a producer nation into a service nation, dependent on foreign sources of goods, much of which are produced by U.S.-based multinational corporations whose loyalty is not to this nation but to the dollar.

The recession cannot be truly proclaimed as "over" until the unemployed have returned to work and the nearly 30 percent of industrial capacity that today lies idle is restored to production. Today's unemployment — about 7 percent by official government figures and over 10 percent by our more realistic calculations — is the measure of how many people must get jobs in order for the recession to be over.

There are some who have proposed redefining the "acceptable" level of unemployment, as if changing the definition from 3 to 4 or 5 or even 6 percent makes unemployment any easier for the unemployed to bear. The difference between 3 and 6 percent unemployment is nearly 3 million people — people who have a right to dream the dream that is America. The right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness is empty indeed if a person happens to be one of the "acceptably" unemployed.

For those to whom dollars, and not people, are important, it should be noted that the difference between 3 and 6 percent unemployment is nearly $48 billion added to the federal deficit.

It should be pointed out that the present underuse of America's productive capacity represents a yearly loss of more than $220 billion in the nation's output of goods and services — over $1,000 per man, woman and child.

It is wrong for any nation, particularly the most powerful and richest on earth, to set its goals lower than can be possibly achieved with a maximum effort. Clearly the United States can do far better than the 7 percent jobless rate forecast for this year or the 5 percent predicted for the end of the decade. It is incumbent upon the platform writers for the two major parties to set this nation's goals even higher, to tell the American people what we as a nation can do, not what we can't do.

Foreign Policy

We believe that the government of the United States has a moral obligation to defend freedom and to lead the free world. Thus, it follows that we believe that trafficking with those who enslave others — those who destroy freedom and mock liberty — is immoral and indefensible.

We do not ask both parties to ban the word "detente" from the political vocabulary; we ask them to ban the current policy of appeasement that word now represents.

We ask both parties to develop and present a firm, but fair, foreign policy that is understandable to the people of the United States and worthy of their support — a foreign policy cast in the same mold as the Liberty Bell, not written in sand or carried around in someone's vest pocket.

The foreign policy question confronting the nation in this political year is between a path that appears deceptively easy — the smooth, downhill road of appeasement — and one that requires intense moral and political leadership based upon an absolute commitment to the concept of freedom for all people, in all places, at all times.

Never in this nation's 200-year history has such a commitment been more vital to the survival of the free world. Around the world, communism is on the march and freedom in retreat. The current foreign policy of the United States has ceded the initiative to the Communists, adopting a theory the American people must never accept: That the United States is second to the Soviet Union.

A foreign policy predicated on America being second best to tyranny is an insult to all who fought and died for freedom. It is a denial of the very rights proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence. It is unacceptable and intolerable and it must not be permitted to continue.

We insist that the government of the United States — acting in the name of and with the consent of the free people of this country — has an inescapable moral obligation to lead the free world. It should support other governments and peoples who yearn for freedom, and shun those to whom liberty is anathema.

The AFL-CIO is implacably opposed to governments which suppress the freedom of their people — whether those governments be dictatorships of the right or the left.

We do not believe that the governments of other nations must — or even should — be patterned on that of the United States. But we do believe that, in order for a nation to be free, there must be full political self-determination for all citizens; that they be governed only with the free — not the coerced — consent of the governed; that there is a paramount, unconditioned right of the people to freely change their government through due process and regular procedures and that free peoples have an absolute right to be secure against aggression and invasion from other nations.

We believe in peace — honorable peace — between nations. We do not believe in the peace of appeasement or the peace of subjugation. We believe the negotiating table to be far preferable to the battlefield, but we recognize that negotiating from a position of weakness is the road to surrender, and negotiating just to negotiate the road to disaster.

We seek no wars — hot or cold. But we will never countenance the appeasement of dictators and tyrants. We reject the contention that the blind pursuit of peace at any price — and not the defense of liberty — is the primary obligation of this nation's foreign policy.

We are for a real detente, a genuine detente.

We are for a detente in which the Soviet Union:

Stops its ideological warfare against the West.

Shows an honest willingness to reverse the arms build-up and to abandon its goal of military superiority in the SALT II negotiations.

Stops sabotaging the efforts to build peace in the Middle East.

Stops arming and encouraging guerilla movements and other efforts of subversion.

Such a detente — a real detente — would be welcomed by the American labor movement, by the American people as a whole, and by all the people of the world.

We believe in the indivisibility of freedom,<sup>4</sup> for no person is truly free while others are enslaved. We believe that the defense of freedom is not an intellectual exercise but a moral obligation. We reject the claims of some that the alternative to the surrender of freedom is nuclear holocaust.

In the conduct of international relations, we believe the Executive Branch has an obligation to confide in the American people; to inform them of decisions which affect their futures and their very lives; to abide by the constitutional mandate to make no treaties or commitments without the advice and consent of the Senate; to refrain from political adventures which, for some momentary political gain, would put the good will of the United States on the side of a dictator and against freedom; to refrain from building the public's expectations to unattainable heights; to honestly report to the people on the results or lack of results of international conferences; and, finally, never to use international relations as a domestic political vehicle.

We flatly reject the concept of isolationism. On this crowded planet, as Alexander Solzhenitsyn so eloquently stated, "there are no longer any internal affairs."

We believe the foreign policy of the United States should encourage the export of the ideals and institutions of democracy, not American jobs, technology and capital. We believe that a foreign trade and investment policy based on the exploitation of foreign wage rates and unacceptably low standards of living will, of itself, encourage the immoral and illegal practice of corporate bribery of foreign governments.

Similarly, we reject the contention that international trade negotiations are solely economic rather than political negotiations. In dealings with Communist and other dictator countries, bargaining must be government-to-government to protect the American economic base and to extract political concessions from dictatorships.

By the same token, we reject the proposal of the Secretary of Agriculture that the United States must "offer concessions in the U.S. industrial market for concessions in the foreign agricultural markets," because we believe that the government of the United States has an equal obligation to protect and enhance the livelihood of all its citizens. It cannot, in good conscience, sacrifice the jobs of industrial workers to the exclusive benefit of the farmer or vice versa.

We believe that those who would attempt to blackmail the United States through embargoes of essential raw materials, such as oil, must know their actions will be met swiftly by retaliatory economic measures by this country. The economy of the United States and the free world must not be imperiled with impunity by blackmailers.

We believe in a defense establishment strong enough, but no stronger than necessary, to meet the obligations of a foreign policy predicated on the defense of freedom. The scope, size and nature of a program of defense spending must be directly related to the scope, size and nature of the forces arrayed in opposition to the United States, its allies and known international commitments.

The military establishment must, however, remain under the firm and absolute control of elected civilian authority, subject always to the check and balances of the Congress and of an informed public opinion.

We are opposed to waste in military spending as we oppose waste in all government operations. But we caution against uncritical acceptance of claims of waste which may, in reality, be attacks on necessary and vital programs.

In short, we believe the Constitution has served and continues to serve this nation well. We would not change its basic precepts, subvert them or allow others to do so.

Domestic Policy

We believe that the government of the United States has a moral as well as constitutional responsibility to represent all of the people, to break down discrimination, to provide opportunity, to feed the hungry, to educate the young — in short, to provide economic and social justice for every American.

It is politically fashionable today for some politicians to attack big government and social programs. Their rhetoric is laced with the code words of division, the tool of the demagogue. They would retreat from the 20th Century, to that so-called "simpler" time when the social ills of poverty, deprivation and discrimination were left to right themselves — the "good old days" of sweatshops, segregation, starvation.

The leaders of this anti-government campaign are those who have always sought to half social progress. They seek to turn the clock back — to tear apart the institutions society has created to protect its citizens and replace them with the ethics of the marketplace.

They appeal to the baser instincts, attempting to create in the minds of the haves fear of the have-nots. And, so, they attack Social Security. They attack the regulatory agencies that were created when people discovered the marketplace has no ethics. They undermine equal employment and civil rights through policies that perpetuate unemployment. They attempt to create divisions among the innocent victims of these policies through dubious schemes that further undermine the rights of workers. They attack education, welfare, public housing, health care programs, food stamps, vocation rehabilitation.

And they attack the labor movement itself, knowing that if we were to abandon the fight for social justice that cause would be lost. They seek to trap us into defending the status quo, into forgetting what we truly mean when we say — as we have said since Samuel Gompers' time — "More."

The status quo must never be good enough for America and it will never be good enough for the labor movement. So, we come before the platform committees of the two major parties to pick up the gauntlet laid down by the opponents of social progress.

The social programs we defend — sometimes in lonely battle — are not good enough. They were created by fallible people and must be improved. Social Security has been good for America, but it can be better. Free public education has made America great, but there must be more of it, accessible to more of the young. Medicare and Medicaid, for all their problems, have helped millions of Americans, but now it is time to extend that help to all people through comprehensive national health insurance.

Workers' compensation, unemployment insurance, minimum wage, occupational safety and health — each of these has bettered the lot of every worker in America, but they, too, must be improved, strengthened, extended.

We recognize the attacks on these programs for what they are. The attacks come from those who fought the programs in the first place, tried to weaken them before enactment, attempted to destroy them through malevolent administration, sought to strangle them through inadequate funding and now seek to palorize America with a "them vs. us" psychology and ride that tidal wave of fear into office.

No one can afford to forget what these programs mean to America and what they mean to the Americans they help, because the alternative to a government with a social conscience is a government that runs poorhouses.

In spring 1975, while the economy was plummeting to the depths of the recession, it was not any "new realism" that saved America from depression. It was "old" social programs — unemployment insurance, Social Security, public service jobs, food stamps and welfare combined with the tried-and-true policy of increasing consumer buying power through a tax cut for low and middle-income families that provided the boost the economy needed.

These are the programs that helped save the nation from a depression:

- * Unemployment insurance including the temporary federal program, provided about $1.3 billion per month in the first quarter of 1975 and prevented a total collapse in the buying power of millions of families. Benefits paid in fiscal year 1976 totaled $18.2 billion and went to approximately 20 million workers.

* The one-shot stimulus of rebates and payments to Social Security recipients helped spark a pick up in retail sales.

* The Social Security system, as of October 1975, provided benefits for nearly 32 million people thus providing essential, continuing buying power for the nation.

* Food stamps during 1975, helped approximately 18½ million people.

Since the food stamp program is under such a bitter and continuing attack from the right, it should be examined in more detail.

1. The food stamp program, serving 18½ million people, cost $5 billion in 1975. The capital gains tax loophole, on the other hand, cost the federal treasury about $5 billion to provide benefits for 600,000 individuals, 88 percent of whom have incomes of over $50,000 a year. By contrast, 87 percent of food stamp recipients live in households earning less than $6,000 a year and 45 percent in households earning less than $3,000 a year.

2. This program has served America on three levels: It helped millions of families maintain adequate nutritional levels and avoid hunger; it assisted agriculture and related retail industries by maintaining consumer purchasing power of food stuffs; and, along with unemployment insurance, welfare and the emergency tax cut, it helped cushion the entire economy from the impact of the recession.

3. Allegations of massive fraud just do not square with official government reports. For example, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which administers the program with a notable lack of top-level enthusiasm for its goals, states that the incidence of fraud is less than one-tenth of one percent among participating households. On the other hand, recent exposes of fraudulent actions by food stamp vendors indicate lax administration of the law and should be swiftly prosecuted in courts of law. We reject the concept of punishing the millions who need this program for the sins of a few.

Heated, overblown political campaign speechmaking is hardly conducive to rational examination of social issues. So we urge both parties to shun expedient rhetoric and place social programs on the balance scale of their benefits to society and seek ways to improve, not destroy, these programs.

For instance, the unemployment, insurance program cannot be measured solely in terms of payouts of benefits to the unemployed, as important as that is. The consequences of a weakened unemployment insurance program adversely affect the landlord, the grocer and the merchants in any community. Large-scale mortgage foreclosures and repossession of home appliances, furniture, automobiles, or other major items considered as part of the American standard of living would not benefit a local business enterprise. Turning the unemployed into paupers before they can receive help might meet the reactionary rhetoric of some candidates, but it would be a prescription for economic disaster for business throughout America.

Secondly, there is a danger inherent in tying up social programs in red tape just to cull out the "chiselers" — that mythical faceless army of people just itching for the chance to ripoff Uncle Sam. With one notable exception, the Health Security program we support, most proposed national health insurance schemes would require the government to keep extensive records on every American as the method of keeping "chiselers" from getting the health care which is their right.

How many hours did each person work? — by the week and the month? How much did they earn? Is it above this level or below that? Have they paid their deductible? Or co-insurance? How many days have they been in the hospital? How many times have they seen the doctor? — because if it is five, then one plan pays, or if it is six, then the patient pays.

Such extensive recordkeeping is not unique to proposed plans for national health insurance. It has infiltrated all social programs, bogging them down in so much expensive and extensive paperwork that their function of providing assistance to people in times of need is severely hampered. And there is an even more fundamental question — a constitutional question. Just to satisfy the demagogues' campaign against so-called "welfare chiselers," the government would be — and is — keeping police state dossiers on millions of Americans.

So, we urge both parties to examine social programs not on the basis of those few who cheat, but those many who benefit.

Summary

The major problems confronting America are 'national in scope and can be resolved only by national solutions, national leadership and national commitment.

It is to these national issues that both parties should address their platforms. We believe that platforms must be above regional, petty self-interest, partisan bickering or the divisionary rhetoric of the demagogue. They must present positive programs — programs around which the people can unite — in order to restore public confidence in the political institutions of this country.

Above all else, platforms should provide moral, as well as economic and political, direction to the conduct of this nation's affairs for the next four years.

The candor we seek must be genuine — not cosmetic. The American people have been lied to too often, for too long. They are rightly suspicious of parties and candidates who try to be all things to all people or attempt to disguise a lack of substance with political slogans.

The lesson of Watergate is not one of human weakness or that the system ultimately worked to cleanse itself. It is that the American people are not afraid of the truth. They are a confident people, with a rich and enduring heritage of facing up to the facts when they know them.

During the darkest days of Watergate, some who lacked confidence in the people, said that America could not stand the truth. The truth, they claimed — an impeachment inquiry and trial — would tear the nation apart. That was nonsense. When the truth finally did emerge, it had exactly the opposite effect as all who truly believed in this nation's character knew it would.

It is nonsense, too, to contend that the American people cannot properly determine the course their country should take in the future, to answer the question "Which way, America?"

No problem is too tough or too sensitive for the people of this nation to solve if its dimensions are squarely laid out to them.

That is what both parties must do in their platforms: Present both the issues and the proposed solutions squarely; restore public confidence by honestly and factually presenting the party's proposals for the next four years; bind standard bearers and legislative leaders to keeping the party's word as put forth in the platform; end the duplicity that undermines public confidence in the candor, honesty and effectiveness of government.

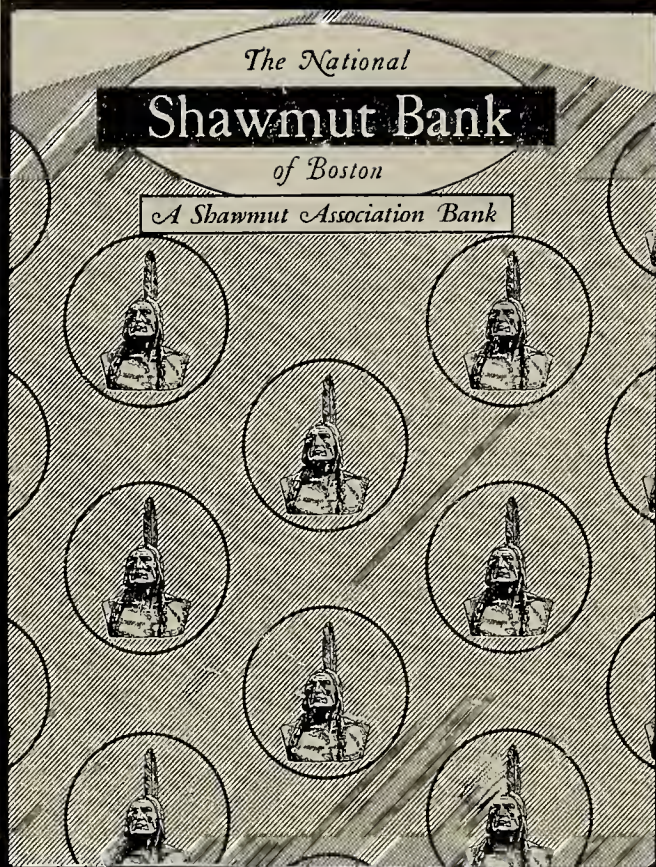

Nothing else would be worthy of the spirit and true meaning of the Declaration of Independence. Nothing less will be acceptable to the American people.

ON WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

Let me apen by saying that the legislotion under consideration here today cannot passibly be regarded as cantraversial. In fact, I am mare inclined to believe that every member of your Committee would agree with me if I said that it is legislation that is long overdue.

Speaking for the warking people af Mossachusetts, where we ore oble to boost that we have one of the best, if not the best, Warkmen's Compensation lows in the notion, let me point out that we ore still filing bills to improve this low every year. Sa if there is still need for improvement in our own Massachusetts law, it should be obvious to all members of Congress that there is a far greater need for establishing minimum federal standards ta upgrade Warkmen's Compensation in all af the fifty states.

Simple justice demands that workers wha are injured ot work or the families of workers who ore killed an the job should be entitled to equol treatment no motter where they live in America.

It is naw mare than sixty-five years since the first Workmen's Compensation law was enacted by the stote of New Yark. That was in 1910. The fallowing year, ten other stotes acted. Then, between 1912 and 1914, eleven states followed. Nine states enacted their workmen's compensation laws between 1915 and 1916, and eight others did between 1917 and 1919. After that, the remaining states, mostly in the South, came in slowly. In fact, by 1939, Arkonsos ond Mississippi were still without workmen's compensation lows.

During those years, the constitutionality of these lows were often questioned in the courts ond employers could crawl through mony laaphales in the lows ta escape their responsibilities ond deprive injured workers ond their families of equitable compensation. The federal government was uninvolved in those years, except in 1917 when the United States Supreme Court rendered three seporote decisions, uphalding the compulsory laws af the stotes of New York ond Washington in two coses ond the elective low af the state af Iowa in anather.

From all this it can easily be seen that warkmen's compensation lows have been frogmented far taa many years ond that it is actually only in recent years that organized labor hos finally been oble to facus national ottention on the vital need far the federal government to get more involved.

When the Occupational Safety and Health Act af 1970 was signed into law, we felt nat only closer ta having minimum federal standards set for workmen's compensation laws in the fifty stotes but olsa that full implementation of OSHA would eventually lead to a lesser need for workmen's compensation. Hawever, in o recently published article by Susan Q. Stronahan, she reveals that after five years on the books, OSHA has not turned out to be "o bill of rights for American warker" or "an example of the American system ot its best" os was expected.

She painted out thot 315 Americons still die every day fram diseases ar injuries caused by their jabs - ond that millions of others survive but ore disabled by gruesome occidends ond job-connected diseases. So far, she wrate, OSHA is a promise thot has nat been kept, ond she blames the federal government for not providing adequate funds ond manpower needed to make the law more effective.

Perhaps the mast important provision of the Occupational Safety and Health Act af 1970 was Section 27, which set up the Notional Cammission an State Warkmen's Compensation Lows. The findings af this Cammission were not only revealing but olsa a little shacking. They faund, far instance, thot instead of improving the nation's entire workmen's compensation system hod been deterioroting for more than thirty years, ond thot it fell far short of what hod been the clear intention af the eorly odvocatotes of workmen's compensation, which hod been thot the weekly benefit amount be related to the injured worker's earnings. In fact, they faund thot as af January 1, 1972, the maxomum weekly benefit in more than half the states did not even come up to the notional poverty level of income.

The Cammission came up with nineteen bosis recommendations that should be octed upon by the Legislatures of the fifty stotes. There has been ample time for the Stote Legislatures to oct. Yet, on July 1 af 1975, twa stotes had complied with only four of the recommendations, two with only six, twa with seven, six with only eight, ond six with only nine. Louisiana stayed at rock bottom with its adaption af anly one recommendation. New Hampshire hod come closest to complete compliance, having at that time odopted seventeen of the nineteen recommendations ond enocted one which become effective on January 1st of this year. My own stote, which boasts of having one of the best warkmen's compensation laws in the country, hod by mid-1975 complied with only ten af the nineteen recommendations af the Cammission.

The need far federal oction is omply demonstrated by this report af the action ar inaction of the vorious stotes since the recommendations were made by the Notional Cammission. In fact, the disparities in the benefits structure of the vorious stotes, ot the time the Commission submitted its report ta the President ond ta the Cangress, are almost unbelievable. The maxomum weekly benefits for a family of four under state workmen's compensation laws ranged from o low of $40 in Mississippi to o high af $152.30 in Arizono. Mossachusetts at thot time was tenth from the top with o maxomum benefit of $95.

After exposing existing state plans as "waefully inadequate to the needs af the injured warker," the Notional Commission, while not odvocatog o federal takeover, did express the hope thot Congress would make all of its recommendations mondoatory throughout the country by July 1 of 1975.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

Now you have before you today a House Resolve which, if enacted, could come close to fulfilling the hope expressed by the Commission. Two months ago, Andrew J. Biemiller, Director of our National AFL-CIO Department of Legislation, appeared before your Committee to urge that House Resolve No. 9431 be enacted - but he also suggested that your Committee revise the provisions of Section 2 and Section 7 of the bill as written before submitting it to the full House of Congress for enactment. He also pointed to the need for a basic change in Section 4, which he referred to as "the heart of the bill." Section 4 as written, he pointed out, would still leave compensability to be determined under state law, which, he said, would be unsatisfactory and inequitable. "Injuries, diseases, and death," he stressed, "which arise out of and in the course of employment, should be uniformly compensable throughout the country." With this, the State Labor Council of Massachusetts thoroughly agrees.

We also agree fully with his recommendations for revisions in other sections of the bill you are considering. I am sure that even if all the revisions recommended by Mr. Biemiller are made and the revised bill is enacted all the problems arising out of industrial accidents will not be solved. If Congress and the various state legislatures ever achieved the impossible dream of putting on the statutes perfect laws covering every aspect of the social and economic needs of the American people, then the very existence of Congress and of any law-making body would become a senseless waste of the taxpayers' money.

The important thing is that this bill, House Resolve 9431, revised as suggested, be enacted without further delay. It is, as I said earlier, legislation that is far, far too long overdue. Injured workers and their families, no matter in what part of the country they happen to be living, should and must be treated with equal fairness and justice.

"The status of the senior citizens of today is a lot different from that of the old people who lived when they themselves were young."

The following commencement address, delivered by President Joseph A. Sullivan of the Honover High School on June 10, 1972, has a theme that will be timely in any generation. That is why we are reprinting here in full:

KEEP FAITH IN AMERICA

"I am highly honored to have been asked to say a few words here today. I assure you that much more could be said on an occasion such as this than I can possibly crowd in the limited time I have.

"However, let me first congratulate you and wish you the best of everything in the years that lie ahead.

"All of you will remember this day as one of the most significant in your lives. Some of you are undoubtedly ready to pursue your quest for knowledge through college – but some of you, I am sure, are planning to enter the work force of America. In either case, you will be facing unprecedented challenges.

"Now this may sound like a platitude – because similar words have been heard by graduating classes throughout the years . . . last year, the year before, and the year I graduated from Boston College High, 1927. Yet, it is the truth every time it is said.

"Let me illustrate this. World-shattering events about which you have read in your history books – such as the landings on the moon, the assassination of President Kennedy, his New Frontiers, his confrontation with a Russian Dictator over the installation of ballistic missile sites in Cuba, the Korean War, the discovery of penicillin, the conquest of polio by the Salk vaccine, the rise and fall of the Third Reich in Germany, World War II, the New Deal of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and the tragic economic collapse which people still refer to as the Hoover Depression of the Thirties – these things had not yet happened when I graduated from high school. In fact, it was just a few weeks before my graduation that Charles Lindbergh made his historic solo flight from New York to Paris. Sure, someone probably told my graduating class that we would be facing great challenges in the years ahead. And I am sure that our parents – the same as your parents are doing today – looked upon us as the best hope of the future. Our parents, like yours, looked upon us as the generation that would cure the ills of the world and create a better life for all.

"Right now, if you look out into the world – with the senseless killings and the wonton destructions of war still going on in Vietnam, with a rate of unemployment making it look as though we had not yet pulled out of the Hoover Depression, with extreme poverty still putting more and more people on public welfare rolls every day, and with some people still classifying others by the color of their skin or by the religion they practice – you may be tempted to ask: "What did your generation do to meet the challenges it faced when you graduated from high school? How can you stand there and ask us to go out and clean up the mess you left us?"

"Well, let me say this. In 1927 we could have asked the same questions of the people who were addressing us. The world we faced was pretty messy. We had read in our history books that World War I had been fought to make the world safe for democracy.

"But it was only five years before I graduated that Benito Mussolini and his Black Shirts had marched on Rome to impose Fascism on the people of Italy. It was only four years before my graduation that Adolph Hitler's "beer hall putsch" opened the way for him and his Brown Shirts to impose Nazism on the people of Germany.

"And in this country we still had sweatshops. We were to wait eleven years to see Congress pass a federal minimum wage of 25 cents an hour. If a working man was laid off in the world we faced, he was on his own. There was no such thing as unemployment compensation. And the America our parents had left us was in the middle of a noble experiment called "Prohibition", which had brought the entire underworld population to the surface, to spread crime and corruption throughout the country. Oh, yes, there were a lot of things wrong with the world we faced as we walked away from graduation with high school diplomas in our hands.

"So you ask what did we do to meet the challenges we faced. I, for one, helped to build an American labor movement that would bring American working and living standards to the highest level in the world. It was during my generation that Social Security was enacted to free the elderly of the fear of the poor house. It was the American labor movement of my generation that established better relations between employer and employees through collective bargaining. It was through the efforts of my generation that more and more young people have the opportunity to finish high school and to go to college. We did accomplish a few things after we left school to launch the world on its way to better living.

"But our ultimate goal is still in the future. And the point I am trying to make is that no matter how messy the world looks as you walk out of here with hard-earned diplomas in your hands – no matter how discouraging the outlook for the future may be – no matter how difficult the road may actually be as you reach out for adulthood – go with confidence. Go with the determination to do everything you can to continue building on the foundation we started to build in the years before any of you were even born. Go out and show your parents that their trust in you, their belief that you can make this a better world, are well founded. Don't lose faith in the American system. It is the best in the world. And remember that you are starting out with more rights than we had. Your right to vote alone gives you a voice in making American democracy work for the good of all Americans.

"And in some future year, if any of you happen to be standing where I am now – addressing a group of high school graduates who are not even born yet – you will be able to tell them of the progress your generation has made, as you warn them that they are about to face unprecedented challenges. And I am sure that you will want to assure them – as I assure you now – that some day, somehow, the impossible dream WILL come true – for all Americans and for all the people of the world.

The Sixth Annual Gompers-Murray Institute, held on May 13 and 14 at the Treadway Inn in Chicopee this year, was, according to COPE and Education Director John A. Callahan, a bigger success than expected. The excellent turnout and the enthusiasm shown during the two-day meetings, said Callahan, indicates that people in general and members of organized labor in particular are deeply concerned about what is happening that affects working people in this country and throughout the world.

GOMPERS-MURRAY INSTITUTE SUCCESS

President Joseph A. Sullivan gave the keynote address on the opening day of the Institute, stressing the vital need for some intelligent leadership to take over and clean up the mess left over by the Watergate era.

Vice President Richard Gill moderated the panel covering the economic area of the conference. In that area, Jack Clayman of the IUD gave a very informative talk on multinationals and their impact on the domestic labor movement. Harvard Professor Elizabeth Allison discussed the economic situation in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

N. E. AFL-CIO Director Franklin J. Murphy and the Reverend Mortimer Gavin, S. J. were the speakers at the luncheon. Both directed themselves to the situation in Massachusetts and particularly in the area of organizing the unorganized.

Whitney Lee Jackson of the A.F.S.C. & M. E. was the moderator for the afternoon meetings. Main topics of these meetings were the Workmen's Compensation Act and the Occupational Safety and Health Act. Judge Bernard Cohen, a specialist in Workmen's Compensation, did his usual effective job in relating his own experiences to the enlightenment of his listeners.

Tim Leary, organized labor's nominee on the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission, joined us for the first time and was an immediate success. He has already been asked to make a return visit in the near future.

At the Gompers-Murray Dinner in the evening, Congressman James A. Burke, Democrat of Milton, received labor's top award when President Joseph A. Sullivan, on behalf of the Massachusetts State Labor Council and its thousands of members, presented him with the prestigious Gompers-Murray Award of Merit. The citation read as follows:

"The Honorable James A. Burke:

"The Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO, with sincere acknowledgement of your years of service as a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives and the Congress of the United States, and of your untiring efforts for the passage of progressive legislation, awards you, in this bicentennial year, the Gompers-Murray Award. May 13, 1976."

The principal speaker at the Dinner was Robert A. Geargine, President of the Building and Construction Trades Department. He reminded his audience that total commitment to the political process is the only sure pass to success at a time when the twin enemies of unemployment and inflation tend to cripple the labor movement.

Then the third Annual Citation of Merit was awarded to Albert Clifton, our own dedicated and effective legislative representative on Beacon Hill for many years. In Al's absence, Institute Chairman Joseph P. O'Dannell, Executive Director of the Harvard Trade Union program, accepted the award on Al's behalf.

Ed Collins, a Business Manager for IBEW, was moderator for the Friday session. In that session, Babson Professor Jack Stamm gave an excellent lecture on pension reform. He gave his audience an opportunity to raise the many questions which confronted them under their respective pension programs.

COPE and Education Director John A. Callahan was very pleased with the work of the Institute and expressed his thanks to all participants. He then vowed his determination to make these annual institutes both informative and effective in the two areas of education as far as working people are concerned, in the political education field and in the coverage of topics which are necessary for the day to day administration of local unions.

DIAGNOSTIC HEALTH SCREENING PROGRAM

Boston and Eastern Massachusetts Carpenters Health and Welfare Fund

The Board of Trustees has recently adapted a new Diagnostic Health Screening Program. Here are the highlights of this important new benefit:

WHO IS COVERED: All members and spouses eligible for Health and Welfare benefits are covered for the Diagnostic Health Screening Program.

WHERE AND WHEN: Diagnostic Health Screening examinations will be conducted in specially prepared and equipped offices now being constructed adjacent to the Carpenters Vision Center, One Broadway, Cambridge, MA. Examinations will be scheduled by appointment only.

WHAT IS THE DIAGNOSTIC HEALTH SCREENING EXAMINATION: The screening examination is a personal, confidential examination performed by trained nurses and technicians including measurements of height, weight, hearing, blood pressure and pulse, urinalysis, blood chemistry, including blood sugar and blood cholesterol, electrocardiogram, chest x-ray, lung capacity and pap tests. The entire examination can be conducted within 50 minutes in most cases.

WHAT NEXT: The Medical Director, James Sidel, M.D., will receive the findings and results of the screening examination and tests. He will issue a personal report to each person. In the event that some further evaluation is indicated, the Medical Director will be more than glad, with the consent of the person, to forward a copy of the findings to the patient's personal physician.

SUPPOSE I DON'T HAVE A PHYSICIAN: The Medical Director and his staff will be prepared to assist persons who schedule Diagnostic Screening examinations in selecting a physician if they are not presently under the care of a physician.

HOW TO BEGIN: When the Diagnostic Center is opened - on or about July 1, 1976 - telephone 354-1085 to schedule the appointment for your examination. The Medical Director will see that you are sent a specially designed form of medical history questionnaire. Complete this simple form and bring it with you to your scheduled examination at the Diagnostic Center.

ALL FINDINGS CONFIDENTIAL: The Medical Director in outlining this new program emphasized that all facts and findings including medical history, measurements, and test results will be kept absolutely confidential and will only be made available to the patient and to the patient's personal physician, with the patient's consent.

WHY BE EXAMINED: All wage earners - perhaps even more so our Carpenter members - depend on their continued vigorous good health in order to earn their livelihood; and in order to remain active and to have the sense of physical well being. But in order to assure continued vigor and good health, they should have a Diagnostic Health Screening examination periodically - whether or not they feel ill and run down; and whether or not they have any symptoms. Take these simple steps so that you can be assured of your continuing good health and that of your spouse. In those few cases where there are early indications of some physical condition that is not up to standard, good medical management should mean control of the condition and resulting good health.

WHAT COPE MEANS TO YOU

Another important election year has rolled around. Even if you don't read the newspapers or listen to radio and TV news, you'd know it... because you're going to be besieged by fund appeals from any number of candidates for all kinds of political offices.

We've always encouraged members to contribute to the candidates of their choice. We still do, but with this reminder:

Before you give to candidates, first give $2 to COPE, the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education.

There's a very practical reason for this:

COPE uses your money better. There's more political mileage in it.

Do you know what often happens to a big chunk of whatever money you contribute to a candidate? He or she uses it to collect more funds.

No kidding. There are recent examples of candidates - a lot of them - spending as much as $1 someone gave them to collect $1.50 from somebody else through costly fund-raising mailings.

This shrinks the hard-earned dollars you generously contribute.

But the $2 you give to COPE is different. In the first place, COPE doesn't have to spend the funds you contribute to it to collect more funds. So every penny you give to COPE becomes available for COPE contributions to endorsed candidates.

And those contributions come at a time when they count most...when a candidate has to use them for direct campaign purposes like needed literature, radio/TV spots, news ads, registration and get-out-the-vote--not just to raise more money.

This makes COPE dollars high-yield, high-velocity funds.

This makes COPE dollars count.

You don't need a slide rule or pocket computer to figure out the arithmetic of it. It's simple: Give $2 to a candidate and maybe half of it is used for real bread-and-butter campaigning.

Give $2 to COPE, and all of it is used the way it should be.

This is a pivotal election year. The Presidency is at stake, as well as scores of too-close-to-call U.S. House and Senate contests. Many good friends of working people face tough races.

COPE funds can help them. They can make the difference.

So, go ahead and give to the candidates of your choice, but first be sure to give $2 to COPE. We use it better.

Speaking before an assembly of faculty members and students at Boston College on April 6, 1976, Secretary-Treasurer James P. Loughlin of the Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO, gave organized labor's views on multinationals. Following is the full text of his remarks.

LABOR'S VIEWS ON MULTINATIONALS

The theme of this conference, the impact that the exportation of jobs by transnationals has had in the United States, is a subject with which every member of organized labor is very familiar today and a condition in which every working man and woman in the United States is directly involved.

Older workers remember the years when "international trade agreements" and "trade balances" were not part of the vocabulary of the working class. There were ups and downs in the American economy, there were threats that plants in the North would move South to take advantage of cheap labor, but American industries were growing and expanding and, except in periods such as the great depression of the Thirties, youngsters came out of elementary schools, high schools and colleges and found jobs. Their parents, in most cases, were people who had spent most of their lives in one job — in cotton and woolen mills, in shoe factories and leather shops, in steel mills and on automobile assembly lines, in furniture and rubber plants, in stores that had a clerk on every counter, and in many other manufacturing enterprise catering to the basic needs of a consuming public. Then the radio appeared on the scene and later television and the electronics industry achieved new heights.

Then a madman in Europe rose to power in the mid-Thirties who eventually launched the civilized world into a disastrous war which left most of the nation's engaged in it bankrupt. The United States was perhaps the only solvent country left when the time came to clean up the mess.

Then the Marshall Plan was created and international trade agreements were formulated in an effort to get the world back on its feet. Let me point out here that the American labor movement supported these plans to revive the world markets, because American labor leaders knew that the American economy and a great number of American jobs depended on a steady flow of exports to healthy markets overseas.

This foreign policy worked well in the years immediately following World War II, even to the point that the economies of the two powers which had been defeated became more stable during the Fifties than the economies of the nations that had won the war. But in the process America was sacrificing several of its most basic industries. Before the war, Japan had been no problem for the American textile industry. Japan made the silk because they had the silkworms, but America was the largest producer of cotton and woolen goods because we had the cotton fields — and the sheep, I suppose. Before the war, Yugoslavia had offered the only serious competition to our shoe industry, but after the war other European countries got into the picture with increasing effectiveness.

At the beginning no one appeared to deeply concerned except weavers, doffers, loomfixers, lasters, cutters or stitchers who found themselves without jobs after having spent the better part of their lives in the same mill or shoe factory, working at what they considered a skilled trade. As the flow of imports from these two industries alone steadily increased, New England was the most affected area in the nation. In Massachusetts alone, once prosperous textile cities like Lawrence, Lowell, New Bedford and Fall River found themselves left with large empty buildings and with high unemployment rates. Large shoe centers like Lynn, Brockton, Haverhill and Woburn felt the sickening impact of plant closings.

The general thinking at the beginning was that America could well afford to sacrifice these two old industries if it meant putting people to work in other countries to create markets for the products of the newer and expanding American industries, particularly in electronics and automobile manufacturing. So that the protests of the textile and shoe industries and of the hundreds of thousands of workers who were being displaced had little effect on Congress.

During the Sixties, however, other major American industries, started to feel the impact of foreign imports — the electronics industry, the automobile industry, and even the steel industry. And the big corporations were able to make Congress listen to the protests. An Associated Press story released on May 7, 1972, reported that the White House had announced agreements with Japan and seven European countries at curbing further inroads by imports into the American steel markets. But it was clearly evident that these countries had agreed to curb their exports because they were afraid Congress would enact protectionist legislation that could have placed stricter limits on their shipments.

Another trend which got progressively and rapidly worse in the Sixties was the transfer of production operations overseas by a growing number of corporations, thus destroying jobs in the United States and creating jobs in other countries — but with the intent of increasing the flow of imports on the American market. These American firms that built new plants overseas to compete on the American markets became known as multinationals — or transnationals as they are called in this conference. By the end of the Sixties, many of them could no longer meet the competition they had created for themselves. This is what happened to the Remington Rand factory in Elmira, New York, one of the largest typewriter factories in the world, where some of the world's finest typewriters, adding machines and calculators were produced. In 1968, there were 6,800 union workers employed there. On April 1, 1970, the last of those employees was laid off permanently. The management said that the plant was unable to compete with foreign-made machines from Remington-Rand's own overseas plants and from those of other manufacturers.

From the beginning of the Seventies, more attention has been focussed on the effect that unrestricted imports and unrestrained exportation of American jobs is having on the American economy. Bills, such as the Burke-Hartke bill, are pending in Congress — but nothing to stop the cancerous growth has yet materialized. The Watergate interval, runaway inflation, and the sometimes farcical electioneering that is currently going on offer no sound excuse for the inaction of Congress on this most vital issue.

LABOR'S VIEWS ON MULTINATIONALS

Let's remember this. During the 1960's America recorded an increase of 110 percent in exports of manufactured goods. But in the same time West German exports increased 200 percent, Canada rose 285 percent and Japan soared by 400 percent. Let's remember that by 1972 all 35 millimeter still cameras were imported. That 96 percent of the magnetic tape recorders, 85 percent of the wigs, 75 percent of the calculating machines and 70 percent of the radios used in America were made in other countries. Let's remember that Chrysler, Zenith, Calgate-Palmolive, IBM and RCA, once great American companies, now call themselves "multinational" companies, with offices, personnel and factories around the globe. You can add Admiral, Bendix, Dow Chemical, Mattel Toys, DuPont, Singer and even Arrow Shirts to this list. There are more and there will be more unless the trend is reversed.

Today, one out of every three employees of a United States multinational corporation is a citizen of a foreign country. In 1960, United States multinational companies were investing eleven and a half cents abroad for every dollar invested here at home for new plants, new equipment and new jobs. Last year, United States corporations invested thirty-six cents overseas for every dollar invested here at home. What all this means for the American worker is that we are definitely in trouble, that massive unemployment will continue to increase, that crime will continue rising, that urban areas will continue to decay as more and more plants close, and that higher taxes will have to be imposed to pay for higher and higher welfare costs.

In a period of six years, up to four years ago, the United States had suffered the equivalent of a net loss of nearly a million jobs directly attributable to rising imports and the movement of American production overseas. In the apparel industry, the ratio of imports to domestic sales increased steadily from 1963 and tens of thousands of American jobs have been lost; in the five years ending in 1972 more than 30,000 American jobs were lost to imports in radio and TV set manufacturing; more than 92,500 jobs were lost in the manufacture of electronic components in that same period; 6,000 jobs were lost in the manufacture of shoes and slippers in one year, 1969 to 1970; and while we had exported twice as many tires and tubes as we imported in 1962, in 1970 we imported 10 percent more than we exported. It is hard to find any industry in the United States today that is not adversely affected by the impact of imports and the exportation of American jobs.

But instead of doing anything to correct all this, you will find that our elected officials have voted to hand out billions of our tax dollars in the form of subsidiaries, guaranteed loans, tax breaks and government insurance programs to assist foreign subsidiaries of America's multinational corporations.

In closing let me make just one suggestion. Anytime between now and November, when a candidate for the presidency of the United States, or for Congress, or for the United States Senate, approaches you and asks for your vote, tell him straight out that you will only exchange your vote at the polls in November for his vote on legislation such as the Burke-Hartke bill.

WOMEN'S INC.

Women Inc. What does that name entail. Women Inc. is an innovative self help residential treatment center (National Institute for Drug Abuse) funded for female ex addicts and their children located on Warren Street in Dorchester.

Innovative, because we represent one of three other women's programs with similar goals, across the nation, ours has the added dimension of children living with their parents which we feel creates a stronger desire for her to look at how she can change her own life to remain drug free once she leaves Women's Inc. and gets herself established in a new life style.

During her stay we make available through referral, as many alternatives as she can handle to effectively change the way she lived in the past. Whether it be a job, schooling or training. Counseling group therapy and role molding are the main stay of our program. Scheduled workshops, seminars and exposure to outside activities help the client to understand her goals in life and how to obtain them.

The Child Care component assumes responsibility for the children while their mothers pursue their goals. Relieving the pressure a woman feels towards her family being well cared for while she is outside the home relieves her mind to concentrate on what she wants to learn. Problems or issues relating to the children are discussed at "Feelings With Felix", one of our scheduled therapy sessions.

Part of what we try to show is TAKE A RISK - TAKE THE FIRST STEP, MOVE FORWARD - it may be painful, but that change can and will happen if you keep an open mind and accept that you want the change enough.

In an address at a Seminar for the Elderly on May 22nd, Secretary-Treasurer James P. Laughlin made some timely and serious comments on certain problems which the senior citizens of America still face. Following is the full text of his remarks:

THOUGHTS ON PROBLEMS OF ELDERLY

"Today, when you talk about senior citizens, you are talking about a large group of influential Americans who have a strong voice in the conduct of national, state and municipal affairs -- a voice which echoes the kind of wisdom that is acquired only through long years of experience in this rapidly changing world of ours.

"You have to remember that a senior citizen is a person who did not have to read books to learn about sweat shops, about child labor, about a prohibition era that brought the entire underworld to the surface, about a war fought to make the world safe for democracy but which ended by paving the way for Communism, Fascism and Nazism, or about an economic collapse that put 25 percent of the work force on the streets without any means of support -- senior citizens did not read about all this in books, they actually lived through it all.

"The senior citizens of today also lived through an era when the authority of parents and teachers was recognized and respected by the majority of the young people; when religious influences had a lasting effect on the behavior of young men and women, when high morality and honor were objectives that inspired the ambitions of all intelligent youngsters.

"Now when you look around at what is happening in the world today -- the filth that is being presented as legitimate entertainment, the ever increasing use of mind-boggling drugs by kids who are still wet behind the ears, the lack of new opportunities for an increasing supply of highly educated manpower -- you have to believe that the great source of know-how and wisdom acquired through long years of experience which now rests among the senior citizens of America must be tapped and put to use.

"The status of the senior citizens of today is a lot different from that of the old people who lived when they themselves were young.

"First, because of the great progress made by the medical world in recent years, old people live a little longer and a lot healthier. So that more and more of them want to and are able to remain active.

"Second, since the enactment of the Social Security Act nearly forty-one years ago, and the improvements that have been made in the law during the four decades, most of the elderly today are more or less financially independent -- and therefore are more able to remain active to help figure out solutions to the serious problems which have been piling up more and more in recent years -- and which affect people in every age bracket.

"I remember that last year a move was started in Congress to make it unlawful for companies to require their employees to quit when they reached their 65th birthday. The Illinois Congressman who introduced the bill said "Life does not end at 65. For many it is the prime of life."

"It was pointed out at that time that a public opinion poll had revealed that more than seven million of the more than thirty million retired Americans had been forced to retire. And at the same time, the American Medical Association had charged that forced retirement often leads to "physical and emotional illness and premature death."

"Congressman Benjamin Rosenthal of New York, who was sponsoring the bill, said that "mandatory retirement relegates seniors to the status of second-class citizens by denying them the basic human right to a job."

★★★★★★★

In a lighter mood, the Congressman from New York said: "If 65 is the age at which you stop being creative, when the brain loses its power and the intellect begins to dim, let's not tell Arthur Fiedler, Clare Booth Luce, Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott, or thousands of others who made their most important contributions to mankind after they had reached sixty-five."

"We could add a few names to those mentioned by Rosenthal -- like our own George Meany. He proved that he certainly knows what it's all about only a few days ago when he refused to cross a picket line in Washington.

"At that time also, the National Council on Senior Citizens, which now comprises more than three million dues-paying members, pointed out that few people can now escape forced retirement at age 65, as 87 percent of all United States Companies require it.

"But if you're a retiree, you still don't have to feel like excess baggage. There is much that you can do -- not only to make your own remaining years interesting but to help make life more interesting for others.

"The first step should be to join and to become active in some senior citizen group. It is these groups that can help in finding part-time jobs when needed, or that can make senior citizens the most powerful politically-oriented segment in American society.

THOUGHTS ON PROBLEMS OF ELDERLY

"And it is groups such as you people here -- all over the country -- that will force the Congress of the United States to continue to be concerned about the problems of the elderly. The cost-of-living clause in the Social Security Act was put in there because of the pressure that was put on Congress by the senior citizens themselves.

"But there are still many areas in which improvements can be made, either directly or indirectly -- as, for instance, in the area of medical care. I am sure that all senior citizens should be particularly interested in what happens to the National Health Insurance bill now pending -- and they should add their full support to any group pushing for that kind of legislation.

"Last year, the 3,000 delegates to the Legislative Conference held in Washington by the National Council of Senior Citizens were told that besides national health insurance and Social Security benefits, the elderly should also keep their eyes on what Congress does in such areas as housing, nutrition, social services, transportation and energy.

"So in closing, let me say again that even though we have gone a long way to make life easier for older people in the last forty years, we still have a way to go. And I am sure that all of you here are not about to throw up your hands. Let's keep marching."

AD LIB AD HOC AD VICE AD INFINITUM

There's no limit to what The Ad Studio can do for industrial clients. Create sales literature that sings. Mount a hard-hitting ad campaign. Work up a sound media schedule ... or an imaginative promotion. We're it, neighbor! Not the old-fashioned, button-down, 3-martini account exec you find on Boylston Street, but a fast-growing, fresh-thinking, full-service ad agency that will work harder — and accomplish more — with your marketing dollars.

Ad Studio — see it and believe!

NOTE: The Massachusetts State Labor Council AFL-CIO regrets if any names were omitted from this book. This is due to the fact that they were received past the publication deadline.

Following is a reference list of locals throughout this Commonwealth which deemed this publication and this effort worthy enough to have their names and those of their officers noted, so as to facilitate communication with them by interested parties.

The Council wishes to express its thanks for the support offered by these locals, and their memberships, be they our brethern in the AFL-CIO, Teamsters, or other independent labor unions. In the final analysis, our ends are the same, the common good.

We wish that more of you had taken the opportunity extended you by the Council, and trust that, having now seen the new format of this yearly publication, the membership of those locals not appearing hereunder will take appropriate steps to rectify the situation in following editions.

Once again, thank you for your cooperation.
